A few years ago, the rage for fine wooled sheep became almost a mania and they were purchased at enormous prices. Now too many are rushing to a contrary extreme and are sacrificing them far below their value. The truth is, they were a great acquisition to our country, and may yet prove profitable to their owners. The flood of woolen fabrics which a year or two past has deluged our country from abroad, has greatly subsided, and our own manufactures temporally depressed by the foreign influx, are already rising, and will yet rise higher. Wool will again be in demand, and the owners of sheep will shew their wisdom by keeping and multiplying them. While they will consult their own interest in doing this, they will advance national indep[illegible]. For the raiment we wear, no m[illegible] for the food we eat, ought we to b[illegible]y dependent upon others.—W[illegible] is necessary for our existence and comfort we should provide for ourselves. For us as a nation to send to Europe for articles we can manufacture at home, is as foolish, and must prove as ruinous, as for a farmer to run to a merchant for things which he could have made at his own fireside. And for us to purchase goods of foreign nations beyond what we can pay for in our produce, must be, as loosing a game as for an individual to buy more at a store than the products of his farm will balance. Let the owners of flocks think of these things, when victuallers are selecting their finest lambs for the knife. Let a national spirit have some influence upon all their conduct: they and their posterity, will be ultimately if not immediately the gainers.

Vermont Intel.

It is said, that Spain is about ceding the Island of Majorca to Russia. This will give Russia a footing in the Mediterranean, which has been long desirable. Placed in the centre of business, in the vicinity of France, Italy, Spain and Africa, the enterprize and commercial resources of the Russian empire will form that island into a depot, which will prove the source of great commercial benefits, and probably lay the foundation of future commercial jealousies and disputes. Russia is progressing with rapid strides towards the attainment of power which, when once fixed, Europe will never be able to wrest from her. The eye that has been so long fixed on European Turkey continues its ardent gaze on that rich and desirable country—the blow which has been many years maturing will shortly be struck, and with complete success; for, with the resources of the Russians, it would be a task of little difficulty to drive the Turks out of Europe. Having once possession of Turkey and Greece, the pass of the Dardanelles, and the free egress in the Mediterranean from the Black Sea, together with the islands in the Archipelago, and the island of Majorca, so near the Gut of Gibraltar, these powerful additions in the south, and the great northern channel and possessions on the Baltic, will satisfy the allied sovereigns, that they have developed the resources of the Russians to their manifest disadvantage; and the Russian influence in Germany and Holland, together with the political Holy League, will unite to place the power of that empire beyond injury and controul, and which the strongest confederation will not be able to shake.

The graves of Labedoyere and Ney.

In the cemetery of Mount Louis, Labedoyere and Ney are buried. The grave of the former is enclosed with stakes, nearly as rough as when cut from the hedge. Roses and mignionette grow profusely in the borders, and in the middle of a little grass plat, is a myrtle in blossom, placed there, no doubt, by his disconsolate widow, as an emblem of her unfaded love. A wooden cross painted black, stands within the enclosure, and a garland of flowers hung over it. It is shaded by a weeping willow. No monument marks the spot, but some one has scratched upon the wooden cross "Honor aux braves." North-east of this, at the furthest extremity from the entrance, is the tomb of the gallant Ney. It is a small elegant cenotaph of white stone standing in a square enclosure, surrounded by a neat wooden railing, painted olive green; a weeping willow hangs over it, and roses are planted within the space.—The inscription is simple, but enough for every purpose of a monument—"Here lies Marshal Ney, Duke of Elchingen, Prince of Moskwa."

MISCELLANY.

From the Albany Advertiser.

Extraordinary instance of Love in a Female in Bengal, from Nathaniel G. M. Senter's Travels, in India.

In the vicinity of Rajamahl, in the province of Bengal, the traveller's attention is arrested as he saunters on the banks of the consecrated Ganges, by a spectacle, which awakens every tender emotion of the heart.

I approached the hallowed spot which covers the dust of a brave and affectionate man. At his tomb, I saw a beautiful Hindoo girl, bending her head, her bosom suffused with the tender agonies of love—weeping in silence. Here, amid the silent recesses of a beautiful grove, I found this mourning daughter of sorrow, strewing with religious respect the most fragrant flowers over the body of a beloved hero. I had purposely extended my excursion up the Ganges to be a witness of this affecting—this lovely scene. By the request of Captain Fotheringham Frasier, of his majesty's 74th Highland regiment. I visited this spot sacred to the mystic bonds of love. From that interesting and intelligent officer I collected the story of her love—her fidelity and afflictions. She became the mistress of a British officer, a Major in the East India Company's service, in the year 1790. During ten years of severe service, in this inclement region, she accompanied him in every campaign faithful to him in every distress incident to a military life in India. Though not connected in the solemn rites of marriage, he was true to the being whom he protected.

In health and sickness she was the devoted partner of his joys and sorrows, giving joy and pleasure to him in the hours of festivity and love.—Thus the faithful partner in his toils, death awakened her bosom to a loss she could never forget or sufficiently deplore. We now behold this interesting Hindoo performing the last sad offices of mourning friendship.

The hero has departed: and with him fled her joys—her felicity and hopes. He was buried not far from Rajamahl, amid some very lofty Palm Trees. It is now near three years since she has officiated as the mourning priestess in the solitary groves of Rajamahl. Her bosom still beats with the tumults of melancholy love. Still he lives in her memory, which faithful to its trust, recalls him from the tomb.

Unwearied in the pious charge, she daily decks the turf with flowers gathered from the surrounding valleys. No worldly care steals to her bosom to fright the image of her departed lover. No parent—no child interrupts the unavailing signs which echo through the wood.

At the rising of the Sun, she performs her daily offering—calling the splendid luminary of the world, to witness the sanctity and sincerity of her inviolate regard.—Solitary and inconsolable, she appears wholly absorded in the delicate remembrance of the tenderness and virtue of the deceased—Morning and Evening we find her officious in the same sacred duties—we behold her.

"Like patience on a monument smiling at grief."

Nothing in the Roman ages of gallantry and love can surpass the devotion of this artless and romantic Hindoo.—Phedra in love with Hypolitus—Cleopatra with the asp upon her arms, expiring in ecstacy for Anthony—a Capulet with poison to her lips in comparison with the dignified sympathy and fervid passion of this Juliet of the East.

Remote from the society of her kindred it is an enquiry who befriended the mourning idolater? how did she subsist?—what sheltered her from the rude tempests of that torrid clime?

To the humanity of the Brahmins of Muxadabad and Rajamahl she was indebted for the few simples which nursed her, amid her sufferings and seclusion. Rice was her food—"the christal spring her drink—her food the strangers alms. I went to see her, and my heart was touched with reverence and with pity." A small Cottage thatched with the leaves of the Palm Tree, was the nightly retreat of this widow of grief. She had in consequence of her affection for this christian, forfeited her standing among the members of her religion. By the discipline of the idolatrous sect among whom she received her birth and education, cohabitation with a christian condemned her to contempt and disgrace. She made the sacrifice—all for love. In the chaste embraces of that holy flame, she forgot her gods—her temples—her religion and her country. In imitation of the Heroine of the Paraclete she exclaimed, "Curse on all laws but those which love has made." Such constancy and veneration for the relics of a British officer, drew the attention of every traveller, who visited the Upper Provinces of Bengal.—Celebrated for her piety and patience, she was an object of universal curiosity. In a particular manner she excited the attention of the British officers who were witnesses to the devotion of the beautiful apostate Hindoo. The adverse fortune and indelicate wrongs of Abelard & Eloisa, have long since been celebrated in British Verse. The inspired saphic notes of Pope have raised a monument to the constancy of Eloisa, more lasting than the marble of the Paraclete.* But the Eliosa of Rajamahl. forgetting, by the world forgot, is left amid her sorrows and her grief unnoticed by the Bard and unimmortalized in Verse. The soul of this fond and doating Indian, seemed wholly absorbed in the memory of the heroism and love of the deceased.

Lost to this world, she seemed a captive, extending her hopes and expectation towards another happier clime where

"Wish meets wish, in blessing to be bless'd
No aching void left pressing in the breast."

Juvenile Indiscretion.

At Marlborough street a middle aged lady, (about eighty eight) charged her son. Charles Richmond, a lad not yet quite seventy years of age. with an assault: it appeared that the graceless young rascal had taken offence at his mamma's having lately married, which he conceived to be injurious to his future expectations: he refused to work, and became quite a libertine. His har'em scar'em conduct and youthful frolics, brought on him a maternal reprimand which so enraged him, that he committed the assault in question. He was bound over to keep the peace.—London Paper.

DIED, in Germany, Dr. John Stilling. He was famous for his numerous writings, and for his piety, which degenerated into illuminism. He was in his youth a tailor, and then a Tutor. He afterwards became doctor in medicine, moralist, religious writer, journalist, politician, visionary, naturalist, and an excellent oculist.—He had operated for the cataract with great success, on more than 200 poor persons. In his journal, l'Home Gris, he predicted the coming of Antichrist. His works were much read in Germany, because he wrote with simplicity and interest.

PITTSBURGH.

FRIDAY, JUNE 27, 1817.

CITY BANK OF PITTSBURGH.

A communication has appeared in the Greensburgh Register, in which the most virulent hostility is displayed against the City Bank of Pittsburgh. It is not only stated that the Bank is unchartered and established contrary to, and in defiance of, the law, but that the stock is held by a few individuals, who design to deceive and swindle the public. The Gazette has also mentioned it but with more moderation.

It is strange that the editor of a paper can so far forget the duty he owes to the public and to his own character, as to publish round assertions of this kind without any proof of their veracity. If the editors above mentioned, had taken the trouble to enquire, they would have learned that the President, Cashier, and Directors of the City Bank are gentlemen of whose honour and integrity there can be no doubt, and who would not lend their names to any institution for a dishonest purpose. They would also have found, that although the City Bank may not have obtained the suffrages of the enlightened people of Greensburgh, it is considered by our own citizens a respectable and useful institution, well managed and worthy of confidence.

Frequent intimations (says the Cincinnati Spy) of a hostile disposition among the Indians are in circulation of late. Our neighbouring Indians may indicate some feelings of hostility, but we strongly suspect the most of the fears on this subject have arisen with some speculating gentry who wish to be concerned with some public lands near the lake. It has been expected the lands owned in this state by the Indians would soon be purchased; "but more recent advices, says the Columbus Gazette, induces us to fear that this purchase will not soon be effected. By a gentleman direct from Lower Sandusky we learn, that the Indians positively refuse to sell the country in question; but General Cass, to whom the negotiation is entrusted in behalf of the United States, expresses his opinion that he can ultimately succeed in effecting the purchase." Reports of this nature we think should be very cautiously received when brought by gentlemen just coming in from that quarter, who have perhaps been exploring the premises with a view of attending the sales in July next at Wooster. The prospect of a disturbance with the Indians, or of their refusing to dispose of the territory claimed by them within the limits of this state, would very much favor the views of those who wish to purchase largely at the sales.

Battle of Trenton.

Extract from the 1st vol. chap. 3, page 129, of Wilkinson's Memoirs.

"It was now broad day, and the storm beat violently in our faces; the attack had commenced on the left, and was immediately answered by col. Stark in our front, who formed the enemy's picket, and pressed into the town; our column being close at his heels. The enemy made a momentary show of resistance by a wild and undirected fire from the windows of their quarters, which they abandoned as we advanced, and made an attempt to form in the main street, which might have succeeded but for a six gun battery opened by captain T. Forest under the immediate order of Gen. WASHINGTON, at the head of King's street, which annoyed the enemy in various direction; and the decision of captain William Washington, who, seconded by Lieut. JAMES MONROE, (now President of the United States) led the advanced guard of the left column, perceiving that the enemy were endeavoring to form a battery, rushed forward, drove the artillerists from their guns, and took two pieces in the act of firing.

"These officers were both wounded in the charge; the captain in the wrist—the lieutenant through the shoulder. These particular acts of gallantry have never been noticed, and yet they could not have been too highly appreciated, for if the enemy had got his artillery into operation, in a narrow street it might have checked our movement, and given him time to form and reflect; and if he had retired across the bridge in his rear, and taken post, he would have placed a defile between us, which in our half naked, half frozen condition, he ought to have defended against our utmost efforts —and we in turn might have been compelled to retreat, which would have been fatal to us."

A HORRID ACT!

On Friday last about 11 o'ciock, A. M. a most daring and atrocious attempt at murder took place in the town of Hallowell, by capt. Michael Morrison's shooting his wife in the public street.—It appears that for years he has treated her extremely ill, insomuch as to induce her to apply for a divorce, which was granted on Wednesday last, with possession of property, and the care and maintainance of the children. This having been effected, he was enraged to a degree that no efforts of her's could appease or deter him from this horrid purpose—accordingly as she left the house to escape the threats of the monster, he levelled his gun, loaded with 2 balls and a large quantity of shot, and placed the whole charge of shot in her body and limbs—the balls missing the object, went into the ground. She was immediately conveyed by the assistance of friends to a house adjacent, where, on Friday evening, some hope was entertained of her recovery.

Morrison, who had retired to his bed with one of the children, was apprehended soon after, and from appearances had taken a dose to quiet the sting of remorse —but medical skill removed the draught from its station, and he was committed at Augusta for trial. (Argus.

Bombay papers of Jan. 4, have been received at Baltimore. The only news given from them relates to the predatory incursions of the Pindarees who had for some time been very troublesome, and a remarkable defeat of a body of these men, by Maj. Lushington, with a regiment of light cavalry. After a march of fifty-three miles with three hundred and fifty men, he took a body of 3000 Pindarees by surprise, attacked and routed them, and continued the pursuit 10 miles in the course of which he estimates that he killed and wounded 7 or 800 men.

The Earthquake recently felt in this place, appears to have caused a severe vibration along the eastern coast. At St. Andrews, the alarm was so great, that the soldiers fled their barracks, and many inhabitants their dwelling houses, fearing to remain within their tottering walls.

Bost. Gaz.

It appears by the papers, that some men lately sentenced to death in North Carolina, for negro stealing, have had their punishment commuted to "imprisonment in a dungeon for twelve months." They have a strong dislike in that state to hanging for any offence committed towards negroes—murder not excepted.—It is much to be regretted, that when laws exist, they should not be executed. If the North Carolina people consider it proper that negro stealers and negro killers should not be executed when convicted, it would be much better for them to repeal their laws, or for their tender hearted governor to pardon offenders before trial. It would, at least, save expense, and would not encourage offences much more than pardon afterwards.

N. Y. Pap.

ROYAL WISDOM.

By a paragraph from some English papers it appears that the King of Bavaria has issued a decree, ordering that no Freemason shall hold any office of trust or profit in his dominions. It will be recollected that Queen Elizabeth once attempted to put down this fraternity or to become a member of it, and absolute as she was she found herself unable to destroy them. In latter times the institution has been considered not merely an innocent but a laudable one, & most of the Sovereigns of Europe in the present age have become its members.—The intelligent monarch of that intelligent nation, Spain, has issued his maledictions against the order, and the King of Bavaria has followed his example, but they are neither of them Solomons.

Fed. Rep.

Burying Grounds.—Among the Romans none but the Emperors, and persons signalized by great actions, were allowed to have tombs in the cities. The pestiferous practice of burying corpses in temples was never practised till the near approach of the age of Gothic barbarity:—the common and even the genteel people in the best days of Rome were buried in the country by the way side, and their monumental inscriptions were so legible that those who ran might read. They began with the words "stay traveller"—and were an instructive means of amusing way-faring men on their journeys. May not the prevalence of the yellow fever in America be in some measure attributed to our suffering burying grounds to occupy the spaces in the midst of our towns, which might be better appropriated as public squares or botanic gardens? [Bost. Curon.

Sagacity of the brute creation.—A German count had a very valuable dog, a large and noble looking animal: in some description of field sports, he was reckoned exceedingly useful, and a friend of the count's applied for the loan of the dog for a few weeks' excursion in the country—it was granted: and in the course of the rambles, the dog, by a fall, either dislocated or gave a severe fracture to one of his legs.—The borrower of the dog was in the greatest alarm, knowing well how greatly the count valued him—and, fearing to disclose the fact, brought him secretly to the count's surgeon, a skilful man, to restore the limb. After some week's application the surgeon succeeded, the dog was returned, and all was well. A month or six week's after this period, the surgeon was sitting gravely in his closet, pursuing his studies, when he heard a violent scratching at the bottom of the door: he rose, and on opening it, to his surprise, he saw the dog, his late patient, before him in company with another dog who had broken his leg, and was thus brought by his friend to be cured in the same manner.

Cure for Coughs and Colds.

HAMILTONS' ELIXIR,

A SOVEREIGN remedy for colds, obstinate coughs, asthmahs, sore throats, and approaching consumptions, and most disorders of the breast and lungs.

A SINGLE TRIAL

Will prove, that it restores the determination of the fluids to the surface of the body, and brings on the common healthful perspiration; that it dislodges and evacuates the tough viscid phlegm or mucus, strengthens the weakened vessels of the lungs, sheathes the acrimonious humor which irritates them, and finally discharges it Thus striking at the root of the disorder, the symptoms are of course, effectually and permanently conquered; the reverse of common medicines, which weaken the constitution and gives strength to the disorder, for the sake of moderating for the present, some of its painful effects

To parents who have children afflicted with the WHOOPING COUGH, this discovery is of the first magnitude, as it affords immediate relief, checks the progress, and in a short time entirely removes the most cruel disorders to which children are liable. The Elixir is so perfectly agreeable, and the dose so small, that no difficulty arises in taking it.

TO H. LEE.

Being desirous to make public, for the good of others, the excellent quality of HAMILTONS' ELIXIR, prepared by the late Mr. Lee, I have sent you the following account of the benefit I have received from it, which I hope will induce others to give it a trial. In consequence of a bruise on the breast, received from a fall, my health grew bad, my breathing became very difficult, and frequently I have had to rise up in my bed, with all the horrors of immediate suffocation. Add to these a constant pain on my breast, and a cough, a great loss of strength and flesh, and you may conceive that my symptoms evidently indicated an approaching consumption. The advice of a most eminent physician was resorted to, and afterwards a second was called in, but without giving me any relief. Another physician who knew me and the circumstances of my case, advised me to give Hamiltons' Exixir a trial, saying, he had used it in his practice, and always found it do much good. A bottle was procured, and I found relief before I had taken half of it. I continued to use it, and was soon strong enough to attend to business. On taking cold, some of my former symptoms return, but are always removed by a dose or two of the Elixir.
